

Born to teen parents in 1953, Lynn entered a world wrought with problems from the very beginning. She grew up experiencing frequent abuse from family members, neighbors and schoolmates. As a young adult, Lynn sought love, care and attention, but what followed was a series of troubled relationships. In an attempt to dull the pain of her life, Lynn became addicted to drugs and alcohol, later to learn that she suffers from a mental illness. Lynn is learning to overcome this disability in her life, through her faith in and relationship with God. It is Lynns desire to help others who may be facing some of the same difficulties that shes been through. By giving examples of her faith and trust in God, she wants to show them that they too can have hope. In this diary-like devotional, you will experience living with mental illness through her eyes. Lynn currently lives with her husband, Hank, sequestered in a wooded area of Maine.
