

The Green Horsemen is a collection of tales of a Jewish boy during the Nazi occupation of Krakow. The book is written in the third person, in spite of its biographic background, because many of the people described in the book are still alive. Shmuel Rothbard was born in Krakow, in September 1, 1933. On his birthday, when he was six years old, World War II started and the Germans crossed the Polish border. Shmuel spent the entire wartime in Krakow, changing places of dwelling, until the family was forced to move into the ghetto. There he lived until the ghetto final liquidation. In the last day of ghetto, Shmuel the child escaped to the Polish part of Krakow, to the "Arian" side, where a Polish friend of the family hid him with his two sisters, until liberation. In 1947 Shmuel immigrated to Israel illegally, was captured by the British and deported to a refugees camp in Cyprus. In the summer of that year the British approved Shmuel for immigration to Israel, and since that time Gan Shmuel has been his home.
